COMPANY 1354 was organized at Fort Washington, Md., and under the command of Captain Otto Saltzman, USMC, arrived at Camp S-92, Asaph, Pa., June 21, 1933.

The following officers have commanded this company:

Capt. Edward Roach, Inf.-Res., from September 1, 1933 to April 30, 1934; Capt. Fred L. Miller, Inf.-Res., from April 30, 1934 to May 7, 1935; Capt. Karl B. Bowers, Inf.-Res., transferred from Camp S-129, Waterville, Pa., May 7, 1935., and commanded to June 25, 1936; Second Lieut. Salvatore

G. Militana, Eng.-Res., commanded the company from June 26, 1936 to July 5, 1936; Captain George H. Hart, Inf.-Res., transferred from Camp S-141, Indian-town Gap, Pa., July 6, 1936, and is the present Commanding Officer.

The Work Projects of the camp cover 27,000 acres consisting of road construction, silviculture, blister rust control, and game protection.

On Christmas Day, 1934, a fire of unknown origin destroyed the Orderly Room, Hospital, Supply Room, and one Barracks. Because of the damage incurred and the unsuitability of the location on private property, it was deemed advisable to transfer the camp to a new site. Thus in May 1935, Lieut. Wise, QM.-Res., was assigned to the company with the duty of moving Camp S-92 four miles south to Darling Run State Park, and on June 6, 1935, the camp number was changed to S-155. The camp adopted the name of "Darling Run Camp" from Darling Run, where the camp is located. At the same time the camp paper, "The Ridge Runners Gazette," was renamed

"Darling Run Echo," under which name it has repeatedly gained three and four star ratings.

During the floods of March, 1936, this camp was partially inundated. No serious damage was done and the company carried out its orders by transporting wood, lime, and other materials to the stricken areas of Williamsport and Jersey Shore.

Educational activities have been maintained at a high level with the aid of competent instructors. The results of the enrollees' interest in handicrafts have made possible many interesting exhibits, which have been shown not only at the Educational Advisers Conferences, but have been viewed by more than 50,000 people on two occasions at the Tioga County Fairs. Results in Academic classes show that Enrollees Ditta, Stitick, Bowers, and DeAngelus are now listed as undergraduates at various colleges.

In baseball, softball, and basketball, the outstanding athletic teams of the company have met in successful competition members of local leagues.
